NEW SKI RESORT OPENS

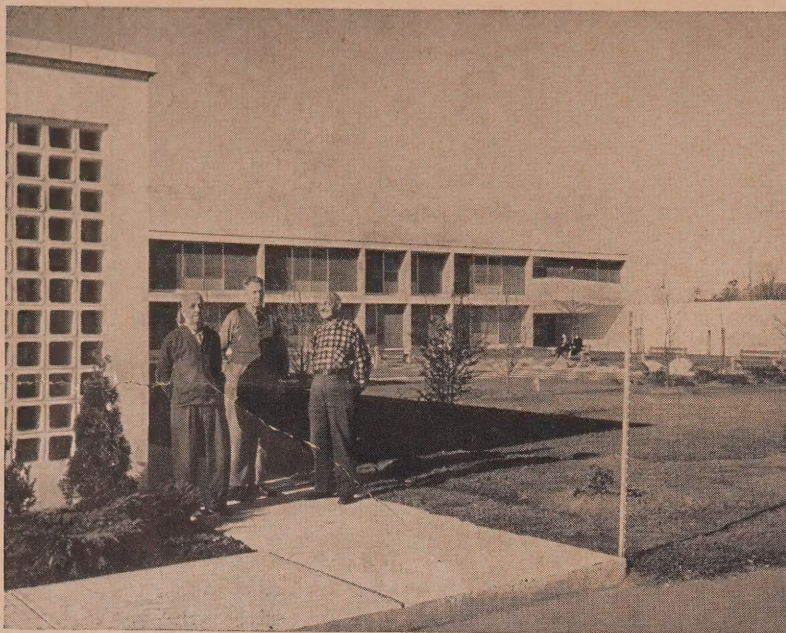

A fine addition to a booming ski industry in Ontario, the $600,000, "Beaver Valley" resort, opened recently by Hon. James Auld, Minister of Travel and Publicity and Reeve Gordon McMullen, Euphras Township. Located nearby Kimberley the resort is designed as a typical Tyrolean chalet, and is in the heart of one of Ontario's most active ski areas, Beaver Valley.

"This is exactly the type of undertaking we need here," Mr. Auld said. He is a strong advocate for expansion of not only the skiing phase but the entire travel industry, now rated as a $1 billion part of Ontario's economy.

"It will not only attract skiers into the Province but will make a lot of Ontario skiers stop and think twice before taking off for skiing elsewhere," he added.

Wide Variety Of Changes Introduced Makes Residents Of Homes Much Happier

WHEN most people think of public homes for the aged in the past, the picture it conjures up in their minds is that of bleak and cheerless institutions. While there is some truth in this picture insofar as Ontario was concerned some twelve years ago, it is now completely false. A transition has taken place whereby, today, the emphasis is placed upon the provision for comfort, a homey atmosphere and decent surroundings.

During the past twelve years the Department of Public Welfare's changes have not only revolutionized the lives of the residents of the Home for the Aged Branch in the municipally-owned and operated building.

The results of these changes can best be seen in the new 120-bed Oshawa Home for The Aged. Located in Oshawa's residential suburbs, and surrounded by lawns, flower beds, shrubs and a flagstone patio, the building, with its modern red brick facing and picture windows resembles an elegant private house. Inside it are wide sunny hallways; floors of light-colored linoleum or rubberized tile; a well-stocked library; lounges with modernistic furniture; colourful drapes, potted plants, television sets and pastel walls; a beauty parlour for women and a barber shop for men; a tuck shop; an auditorium for shows, bingo games and parties; a pool room; craft shops for men and women; a chapel where services are held several times each Sunday; a dining room with picture windows and intimate tables for fours; and bright bedrooms with beds especially designed for elderly people.

The residents look just as happy as any other group of people. Their faces, in most cases, are bright and cheerful, and they are often engaged in conversation with one another, or with members of the Staff, with most of whom they are on first-name terms.

The residents also look just like anybody else in their own homes. They are dressed in clean, comfortable clothes, the women have fashionable hair-dos and the men have their hair cut. In most cases men and women dress quite informally, since they are in their own home. The women sometimes wear print dresses and the men usually are tie-less. Often men and women appear in bath-robcs and slippers, particularly if they are partially confined to bed and are up only for a short time for such purposes as sunning themselves on the patio or watching a favourite TV programme.

Although there is an air of friendly informality in the Home, most of the residents who are well enough to be up all the time are usually seriously engaged in some activity or other. These include embroidery, pool, carpentry, sewing, watching TV, holding tea parties for friends or relatives, or just sitting on the patio or in a lounge talking with friends on their favourite subject, the Past. Some of the residents are not even in their Home during the day or evening. For some take the local bus which stops at their door, and gallivant off down-town to visit relatives or friends or just window-shop.

The biggest factor which has changed the public Homes For The Aged picture in Ontario is the new Homes For The Aged which have been built in municipalities across Ontario since 1950. These have not only been attractively designed both inside and outside but their architecture has also been planned to make them look as much as possible like a private home rather than an institution. This is to make residents realize they are not confined in an institution where they must do as they are told, but in their own home. Consequently residents feel they are free to do as they please and this makes them more relaxed and happy.

idea ⁷to ensure that all Home and additions to Homes are designed with this in mind, all architects' plans for such purposes must now be approved by the Branch. However to prevent any possible standardization of Homes and consequently the creation in time merely of a new type of recognizable institution, the Branch encourages architects to use their individualistic imagination in the creation of plans that combine the architectural warmth of a home with the efficiency of many centralized services.

ONIZES PUBLIC OLD AGE CARE IN ONTARIO

To assist architects in this endeavour, and to acquaint them with the standards required for such facilities as bedrooms, corridors and chapels, as well as many other small features that have been found to be of great practical value to elderly people, the Branch has published "Guide For Architects". Among its large numbers of detailed facts this booklet brings out such points as: corridors should be of sufficient width for the passage of wheel-chairs and uncluttered so residents will not be in any danger of tripping over anything; doors should be without locks since old people often find it difficult to unlock them; grab railings should be installed along corridors; in toilet stalls and bath-tubs so old people can have something to hold onto; and the colour scheme should be closely akin to the warmth and hospitality of a comfortable private residence.

Some of these points are also necessary for the safety of residents in case of fire. In this regard all architects' plans for Homes or additions must be approved by the Fire Marshal's Office.

All furniture to be used in Homes must also now be approved by the Branch. This is necessary since many old people, because of physical weakness in the legs and back, have trouble getting up out of low, soft or deep furniture. To prevent this from happening the Branch, in co-operation with furniture manufacturers, has created chairs and settees which offer firm support to the back and are slanted forward in such a way that old people can get up out of them without undue difficulty or strain. They are also comfortable to sit on and of a design and colour similar to that of ultra-modern furniture.

The monthly menus to be used in every Home must also now be forwarded to the Branch. These are sent to Professor E. W. McHenry, Head of Nutrition of the University of Toronto, to ensure that residents are receiving a properly balanced and appetizing diet.

A new and important function of the Branch is to encourage residents to keep active and interested in something as much as their physical and mental powers permit. The idea behind this is that people are much happier and healthier when they're doing something than when they're just sitting down and looking at a wall.

To carry out this function the Branch has a full-time Consultant in handicrafts whose purpose is to interest the ladies of a community in forming a Ladies' Auxiliary to their Home For the Aged. These ladies then agree to take turns visiting the Home to interest and encourage residents in a wide variety of activities. These include wood-working, leathercraft, basketry and painting for the men and sewing, knitting, crocheting and embroidering for women or even publishing a "newspaper" of the Home's news.

The Ladies' Auxiliary also provides entertainment for residents. This includes birthday and Christmas parties, bingos, sing-songs, card games and Spring and Fall Bazaars for those who wish to exhibit and sell the handicrafts they have made. In addition the Ladies' Auxiliary operates the Tuck Shop.

An important new adjunct to the Homes For the Aged programme is the Department of Public Welfare's Advisory Committee on Geriatrics, or the study of diseases of old age and ageing. This Committee, composed principally of prominent physicians, advises the Minister on what medical treatment and procedures are best for residents of the Homes.

The Committee is also responsible for maintaining, in conjunction with Metropolitan Toronto, a Geriatric Study Centre at Lambert Lodge. Its primary purpose is to observe and evaluate the effects of known medications and procedures on residents of the Homes so the information obtained may be used to improve the diagnosis and treatment of the diseases of old age. This information will undoubtedly be of great importance as the number of older people in Ontario's population continues to increase.
